Richie Kotzen's Personal Goodtime Banjo – Played on “Jesus in the Way” by Alter Ego Kent Stanfield

If You Know, You Know – The Banjo Behind the Cult-Favorite Kotzen Track

This USA-made Goodtime banjo was personally owned and played by Richie Kotzen — and used during the recording of the track “Jesus in the Way” under his legendary alter ego, Kent Stanfield. If you're a die-hard Kotzen fan, you already know that Kent Stanfield isn't just a pseudonym — it's a whole vibe. And if you don't? Stop what you're doing and go Google “Kent Stanfield Jesus in the Way” right now.

What Makes This a Killer Lot:

- ✓ Goodtime Banjo – Made in the USA
- ✓ Personally Owned and Played by Richie Kotzen
- ✓ Used in the Recording of “Jesus in the Way” by Richie's Kent Stanfield persona
- ✓ Unique Collector's Piece – Acoustic gold with a quirky twist of Kotzen
- ✓ Studio Use – Not just a prop, this one saw real action

✂ This isn't just a banjo — it's a window into Richie's wild creativity and sense of humor. Whether you're a tone freak, gear junkie, or just obsessed with the deep cuts, this piece brings a whole different flavor to the collection. One-of-a-kind performance gear from one of music's most versatile artists.
