Description

OWN a Piece of the Historic Libbey Shreveport Factory – End-Grain Wood Block Flooring – Bid x 12

Salvaged directly from the iconic Libbey Glass Factory in Shreveport, these solid end-grain wood blocks once formed part of the factory floor beneath decades of American industrial history. The blocks offered here were already loose and stacked in piles—lifted long ago during past equipment removal where the floor had begun to buckle. No flooring was disturbed for this sale.

- Approx. 2" x 4" x 6" each
- Bid x 12 blocks (example if you bid 20.00 x 12 your total bid will be $240.00)
- Authentic, industrial-aged condition

Factories in the early- to mid-20th century, including Libbey, used end-grain flooring for durability, impact absorption, and to reduce breakage from falling materials. In glassmaking environments, it also made rolling carts and handling fragile goods safer and smoother.

These blocks are ideal for display, repurposing, or resale—an authentic slice of American manufacturing legacy. See images for details.
